SENTENCES (KINDS OF SENTENCES)

A group of words arranged in proper order that has sense can be called a sentence. Every sentence must be meaningful and express complete thought. We find a subject and a predicate with verb in a sentence. All sentences begin with capital letters.

A sentence that makes a statement or declares something is called declarative or assertive sentence. It ends with a period(.).

Examples: 1) I like red roses.

2) He goes to school every day.

A sentence that is used to express an order/ a wish / a request / a command / an advice / a suggestion / a proposal is called an imperative sentence. In many imperative sentences the subject (you) is understood. Words like let / please / kindly are used in imperative sentences. Usually imperative sentence ends with a period(.).

Examples: 1) Don't make noise.

2) Please forgive me.

3) Let's have fun time.

4) You should help the poor.

A sentence that asks a question and ends with a question mark (?) is named interrogative sentence.

Examples: 1) Are you a great boy?

2) Can you lead our team?

A sentence that expresses a strong and sudden feeling / emotion / excitement is said to be an exclamatory sentence. It conveys our joys / sorrows / regrets / contempt / applaud / surprise / wonder. It ends with an exclamation mark (!).

Examples: 1) What a pleasant sight!

2) How beautiful is the peacock's dance!
